- 3. Although a very good first impression had been acquired at the border, the majority of the delegates soon became skeptical. After nightfall they crossed the town of Alba Iulia where they noticed some brightly lighted barracks just to the side of the railroad about 10 kilometers from the town. It was only at Bucharest that 400 people, formerly deported to the Danube-Black Sea Canal, were being held there in a camp enclosed with barbed wire.
- 4. The delegation went through several stations decorated with flags and streamers and heard dancing music playing. At noon on 2 August 1953 they arrived at Bucharest at the Mogosoaia Station where everything had been prepared to receive them.

  The delegation were everything had been prepared to receive them.

  The welcoming group was made up only 25X1 of active members of the RPR who had obtained permission to go inside the station. These people as well as a large number of children had been quartered in schools for several days before their arrival and had been fed, and taught what they should say to the strangers. The delegates also noticed that all around the train depot a crowd of curious people had gathered and were forbidden to approach the visitors. However, the guard could not prevent some of the delegates from breaking the line and they were received also by the unauthorized group. It was noticed that this latter reception came from the heart and had not been ordered. Several of the visiting group later said that they had been asked for watches, nylons, shirts, et cetera,
- 5. When this delegation left Bucharest their train did not return by way of Curtici, but rather by Oradea and Episcopia-Bihor. At Oradea the interpreters who had been put at their disposition for the duration of their sojourn got off the train. The Militia soldiers and Securitate agents in plain clothing (2 to 3 in each car) traveled with them as far as Episcopia-Bihor.
